OLD HUTCH HAS ENOUGH.

Reports As To The Wheat King.

HAS HE WITHDRAWN FROM BUSINESS?

It Is Said His Family Has Induced Him to Quit Dealing in Options—He Will, However, Manage Deals for Others.

HEAVY LOSSES IN LATE YEARS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—The fact that Mr. B. P. Hutchinson, the veteran Board of Trade man, had suddenly withdrawn from speculation has been a matter of comment among the brokers for weeks, but it was not until now that the cause of his retirement was known. It seems that Mr. Hutchinson's family was dissatisfied with his peculiar trades and asked him to retire. This the old gentleman flatly refused to do, and his son, Mr. Charles L. Hutchinson, consulted with his attorney and some close personal friends as to the best course to pursue. On their advice he had a talk with his father and told him that unless he would close up his deals quietly and give up all speculative business, that the matter would be taken into the courts and a conservator applied for. Mr. Hutchinson, Sr., was very angry for a time, but finally consented to the terms and at once evened-up his trades and closed his books. It is estimated that Mr. Hutchinson has lost about $19,000,000 within twenty years. In 1870 he was reported to have a fortune of $20,000,000. Ten years ago, his son says, this had dwindled to $10,000,000, and now there is but $1,000,000 left. It was to save this from following the rest of his money that the family insisted upon his retirement.

Mr. Hutchinson's gains, perhaps, have not generally been as large as people supposed. For instance, it was reported that he made between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 on the wheat corner he ran a couple of years ago. It is learned from a reliable source that the profits of that deal amounted to something over $1,000,000. During the last year he has dealt heavily in outside markets and people here do not seem to know whether he has been making or losing. He has stock in a number of big corporations, aside from his speculative busines, that brings him large returns. Mr. Hutchinson, in reply to a question as to whether he had retired from business, said:

"No, I have not. I did two or three months ago decide that I would give up trading on my own account and that I would wind up that part of my business with the end of the year. I had nearly all of it closed up by January 1. There is only a little outstanding, and that simply because it was not convenient to settle it right away. When it is cleared off I do not intend to do any more trading on my own account, but I am still in the commission business and I have done a good deal of it this month. I guess I have done a big lot of it this month. I do not see why I should not keep on doing it. I am just as well able to do it now as I ever was. I do not know that there is any thing the matter with me. I am not feeling quite as well as I have felt, but I suppose that is the result of growing old. It won't interfere with my business."

THE LAST TRAIN ROBBERY.

Additional Particulars of the $20,000 Haul Made by Texas Bandits.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 23.—A special from Brownsville, Tex., says: Additional particulars have been received of the train wrecking and robbery on the Rio Grande railroad on the 19th, in which the bandits secured $20,000 in silver on the way to New Orleans. The train left here in the morning with passengers for the steamship Morgan at Brazos. When twelve miles from here the train was derailed by obstructions placed on the track at a point in the hills near the river bank. Fifteen masked men then plundered the express car, taking the silver shipment above mentioned, and rifled the United States mail pouches. The passengers were then held up and plundered of their money and valuables. The robbers then blindfolded the passengers and trainmen, forced them into a box car, locked them in and left. The derailed cars caught fire from the overturned locomotive, and but for the timely appearance of some countrymen living near the scene, the imprisoned passengers and trainmen would have perished in the flames. The fireman and engineer were seriously injured when the locomotive went over, but fortunately no lives were lost. Officers are on the track of the bandits, but as they are supposed to have crossed the river into Mexico, there is little prospect of their being captured.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Post-Office Inspector Maynard has telegraphed to the department from Austin, Tex., that an investigation shows that the train robbery between Brownsville and Isabell was committed by a band of fifteen armed men. He has offered $1,000 reward for each robber.

GONE WITH THE GEMS.

Simultaneous Disappearance of a Trusted Salesman and Diamonds Valued at $30,000 Belonging to a New York Firm.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—William C. Duncan, a city salesman for the diamond house of Lewesohn & Co., Maiden lane, has disappeared with $30,000 worth of diamonds and pearls. The bulk of the property is in diamonds. Last Thursday he started uptown with about $30,000 worth of goods. On his return he told Mr. Lexow, the manager, that he had left part of the goods for approval with different firms, accounting carefully for each stone. It is learned that he had not been near any of the stores at which he said he left the stones.

THE ROAD IS BLOCKED.

Thus Far the Chicago & Erie Strikers Have Managed to Suspend All Traffic.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Business seems to have been practically suspended by the Chicago & Erie road between Huntingdon, Ind., and this city. No train has arrived here over its tracks since 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and none has left here since the mail that went out at 3:20 p. m. Wednesday. The early mail train that should have begun its eastward trip at 7:30 a. m. did not go out, and nobody at the station was prepared to say when it would. No attempt is being made, or has been made since 10 o'clock Tuesday night to move any freight. General Manager Tucker reports that the strikers have cut the wires between Highland and Hammond, the first and second stations out from Chicago. The company is now obliged to transact its business over the Western Union wires. Mr. Tucker further said:

"The situation is practically unchanged. The men stand by the demand that Scott be reinstated, and the road is equally as positive that it will not reinstate an incompetent and irresponsible employe at the risk of great danger to its patrons. We have held no communication whatever with the strikers, and will proceed to advance meritorious men from the ranks. There are many men in our employ perfectly competent to take the place of the strikers."

Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, says that the engineers on the road would not strike.

Thursday afternoon a delegation of striking dispatchers and conductors at Huntington, Ind., persuaded General Superintendent Morehead to send a telegram to General Manager Tucker at the Chicago & Erie offices in the Phœnix building asking if Mr. Scott would be reinstated. Mr. Tucker's reply was the following terse message:

"GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT MOREHEAD: Neither Mr. Scott nor any of the other train dispatchers will be reinstated or employed in any department. This decision is final and irrevocable. A. M. TUCKER."

Mr. Tucker says it is his opinion that train service will be resumed inside of twenty-four hours. A decidedly different view is held by many conductors, one of whom said that this was only the beginning of a long struggle. He predicted that the strike would spread eastward in a few days.

SENATORIAL CONTESTS.

No Results Reached in Illinois or the Dakotas—Vilas Nominated for Senator by Wisconsin Democrats—Republicans Will Vote for Spooner.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 23.—In the joint Democratic legislative caucus Thursday William F. Vilas, Postmaster-General and Secretary of the Interior during Cleveland's administration, was nominated for United States Senator to succeed John C. Spooner. The election takes place Tuesday. The Republicans will cast a complimentary vote for Senator Spooner.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 23.—In the joint session of the State Legislature, which met at noon, but one ballot was taken for Senator, the result showing no change, the vote standing: Palmer, 101; Oglesby, 100; Streeter, 3. The F. M. B. A. members voted with the Republicans and carried a motion to adjourn.

PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 23.—The third and fourth ballots for Senator were taken Thursday. Moody lost one on the fourth ballot, Representative Way, of Fall River County, leaving him. Two Republicans paired with Independents. The last ballot stood: Moody, 73; Tripp, 24; Harden, 20; Wardall, 10; Crose, 11; Cosand, 7; State Senator Kyle, 7; the remainder scattering. The six Republicans still refuse to vote for Moody and the situation is critical for him.

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 23.—The Legislature, balloting in joint session for United States Senator, has not yet reached a choice, the fifth ballot standing: Pierce, 18; Hansbrough, 21; Miller, 13; Lounsberry, 9; McCormack, 24; scattering, 8.

FUNERAL OF KALAKAUA.

Imposing Ceremonies in San Francisco—The Charleston Sails for Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—The funeral of King Kalakaua took place from the Trinity Episcopal Church of this city Thursday and was attended by a large number of distinguished citizens and Government officials. The funeral arrangements were in charge of the navy and military authorities, and the ceremonies were very imposing. The buildings along the line of march were closed and fully 100,000 spectators viewed the cortage. From the church the body was taken to the United States steamer Charleston, which will bear it to Honolulu. After the body had been placed on board the Charleston's anchors were weighed and she began to move down the bay, while minute guns were fired from the batteries at Alcatraz and the Presidio. About 5 o'clock p. m. the Charleston passed through Golden Gate and proceeded to sea.

Steinitz Wins.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The match between Steinitz and Gunsberg for the chess championship of the world, which has been going on at the Manhattan Chess Club since December 9, was definitely decided in favor of Steinitz Thursday. The game was drawn and the score was brought to this State: Steinitz, 6; Gunsberg, 4; drawn, 9, which rendered it impossible for Gunsberg even to divide the championship honors.

FLOODS SPREAD RUIN.

Disastrous Freshets In The East.

WIDESPREAD DESTRUCTION RESULTS.

Buildings Blown Down, Bridges Wrecked and Dams Demolished—Raging Torrents Rush Through Business Streets.

SOME LOSS OF LIFE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Much rain has fallen over New England and the Middle States, and from many points come tidings of freshets and threatened flood. Bridges are being swept away in Dutchess County, N. Y., and at Wassaic two women and a team were drowned in a swollen stream. In the Mohawk valley a breaking up of ice in the river is feared. There is an immense ice-gorge near Tribe's Hill and people living on the lowlands are becoming frightened. The ice is piled to a great height. The people living along the banks of the Mohawk are ready to leave their homes at a moment's notice. On the lower Hudson there has prevailed the fiercest gale and rain-storm of the season, and some places are completely flooded.

At Highland Light, Mass., a terrific southwest gale has developed and telegraphic communication is cut off. The storm is likely to cause considerable damage in the bay and about Provincetown. The combination of a heavy fall of rain, a very high tide and a strong wind blowing the water in from Long Island sound caused the Housatonic and Naugatuck rivers to rise in an alarming manner. Between 1 and 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon the water rose fourteen feet. A terrific rain-storm accompanied by high winds prevailed at Danbury, Conn., and is doing a vast amount of damage. The water in Still river has risen above its banks and the lower floors of factories along its boundaries are flooded. In all parts of the city cellars are flooded and streets are about impassable. The schools are closed and business is practically suspended. It is reported that several wash-outs have occurred on the New York & New England railroad east of that city.

A terrific rain-storm swept over the Wyoming valley Thursday morning, continuing till 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Over one-third of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is now under water and traffic is completely suspended on the street railway. The steam-heating plant is completely submerged and two fire-engines have been pumping the water out all the afternoon. The gorge in the Susquehanna now extends from Tunkhannock to Nanticoke, a distance of thirty-seven miles, and it is feared that the storm may cause the river to back up and flood the section from end to end. It was rumored that the Tunkhannock bridge had been swept down by the torrent, but up to a late hour the rumor had not been verified.

A dam at Hibernia, N. Y., on Wapping creek, has been broken, adding the water of a large pond to the already swollen stream. The rush of ice and water struck the large iron bridge on the Central New England & Western railroad just below the dam and moved it several feet out of line, stopping trains. An iron highway bridge was destroyed and part of the mill at Hibernia torn away. At Pleasant Valley, a few miles below, the people of the village were driven into the second stories of their houses and were only able to get about in boats. Two or three bridges were carried away on the New York & Massachusetts railroad near Pine Plains.

People residing in the vicinity of Cape Henry were terrified Thursday night by the storm. Houses swayed and trees were bent to the ground. Many inhabitants gathered their valuables together ready to leave, as every moment they expected to see their dwellings blown out to sea. The velocity of the wind reached sixty miles an hour and was somewhat in the form of a cyclone.

Early Thursday morning the water in the Housatonic and Naugatuck (Conn.) rivers began rising and by noon seven feet of water was falling over the dam. All of the factories were closed down at noon and large crowds gathered along the river. Fears were entertained that the dam would not withstand the pressure, so Foreman Curley of the water company stationed sentinels along the river at 6 o'clock and arranged to have an alarm sounded in case of danger. At 7:45 p. m. the gate-house on the west end of the long dam began to waver and the danger signal was at once given. Five minutes after the signal was sounded the gate-house was twisted around by a large body of pack ice, and this movement was closely followed by the giving away of a section of the dam three feet in depth and about 300 feet in length. Just before the dam gave way the gauge showed seven feet ten inches of water going over the dam. The gong continued to sound and the people rushed from their houses amid great excitement. The immense volume of water rushed down the river and the paper-mill and Albert Daggett's postal-card factory were the heaviest losers. Two hundred feet of the Housatonic railroad trestle was carried away at the same spot as in last week's flood. A pile-driver was swept down the river and two men had to jump to save themselves. There is now four feet of water on the Derby railroad tracks and trains have stopped running. A number of factories will be compelled to close. At midnight hundreds of people were flocking to the scene, and great excitement prevails. So far no serious accidents have been reported. The dam, which was built in 1870, was 500 feet long and 32 feet deep. It cost $1,000,000 to build.

THEY OBJECT TO STARVING.

And now Uncle Samuel is asked to buy reindeer for the his dependent nephews in Alaska. On first thought the idea is likely to provoke mirth, but it may in reality be a meritorious one. The mind has hardly become familiar with the idea that Alaska extends up to the Arctic waters and that there is a population of some thousands in the northern half of the vast territory. They are Esquimaux, and have subsisted mainly upon the flesh of whales, seals, walruses and deer. All these sources of food supply have been greatly reduced or rendered very precarious of late by the agency of parties in the main not natives. These Esquimaux do not perhaps add much to the value of the purchase made by Secretary Seward, but they were there first, and never get up ghost dances and make trouble like some other aborigines. They seem to have a right to live although they do not perhaps display much sense in their choice of a location. In bad years of late their commissary stores give out so that they have to fall back upon dogs, old boots and other stuff that people put into the soup only in hard times. One of these seasons five years ago was so severe that it was found necessary to reduce the eaters, and consequently they put out, to gently freeze to death, all the old and helpless, the superfluous wives, scolding women and puny children. Still, a great number died of starvation and disease. The object of the reindeer is to obviate this danger. They are adapted to the country, and it is proposed to bring them over from the coast of Siberia, where there are vast herds of them. A small appropriation for this purpose would seem reasonable as it would afford partial compensation for the losses suffered by the natives, through the white man's coming.

SHORTER COLLEGE COURSES.

There is an active discussion waging in scholastic and literary circles at present as to whether it would not be wise to reduce the course at our American colleges to three years. President Eliot, of Harvard, favors the reduction, and at his suggestion the overseers of that university have considered it, but with some division of opinion. The requirements for admission to the best eastern university have been increased in the last twenty-five years. The number of Greek and Latin authors remain about the same, but the examination papers demand a width and a variety of information on the subjects prescribed that would not have been expected of a graduate in the old days. The effect of this is that, where a boy used to be able to enter the freshman class at fifteen or sixteen, he is now nineteen or twenty before he is ready. The larger professional schools, like the Columbia and Harvard law schools, at the same time have lengthened their course from two to three years, so that if a man takes all his degrees he is twenty-six or twenty-seven before he is equipped for the beginning of life's battle. This is a good deal later than the age at which the men of the past generation started in, and it is open to some question as to whether there is not some waste there.

How unkind of the Milwaukee Sentinel that every time a democrat who occupied a seat in the last legislature sticks up his head on the school question some such remark is made as: "Senator Kroeger is bound to remove the reproach of having approved and voted for the Bennett law at the last session, by being the first to move for its repeal."

Henry Ward Beecher said: "The man who is controlled by circumstances is exactly the man whom circumstances can control." True, and the man who is blown up by sticks of dynamite, which he stands on end before a blazing fire is exactly the man whom sticks of dynamite can blow up.

TO SHUT OFF DEBATE.

The Senate Votes to Consider the Cloture Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—A quorum appeared in the Senate Thursday and the question of the approval of the journal came up. Senator Aldrich (R. I.) took the floor and stated that the Democrats had at last thrown off all disguise and disclosed that they had decided to prevent any legislation unless their wishes in regard to maintaining measures were acceded to. Senator Harris (Tenn.) said that if the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the appropriation bill the minority would consent. Senator Aldrich, at the conclusion of his remarks, moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution to amend the rules by the adoption of a plan of cloture. A point of order was made on the Democratic side that the unfinished business was the motion to correct the journal of Tuesday's proceedings, and that as it involved the status of Senator Aldrich's resolution, it must be first disposed of. The Vice President indicated his desire to hear argument on the point, and the positions on each side were stated by various Senators.

After listening to arguments until 2 p. m., the Vice-President ruled that Senator Aldrich's motion to proceed to the consideration of the cloture rule in order, and overruled Senator Harris' point of order. Senator Harris appealed, but the chair was sustained — yeas, 35, nays 30. Senators Teller, Wolcott and Stewart voted with the Democrats. Senator Aldrich moved to proceed to the consideration of his resolution (closure) and Senator Gorman moved to table it. The Vice-President submitted the question to the Senate, and a vote was taken on it. The vote resulted: Yeas, 30; nays, 35. So the motion to table was lost, and the vote was taken on Senator Aldrich's motion to consider the cloture rule. Senator Aldrich's motion prevailed—yeas, 36; nays, 32. Senators Jones (Nev.), Stewart, Teller and Walcott voted with the Democrats in opposition to it.

The resolution was then laid before the Senate and was read. Immediately, however, Senator Harris called up his point of order made against the cloture resolution Tuesday (that it was not explicit enough to meet the rules). The Vice-President ruled against him, but Senator Harris took an appeal and was permitted to debate it. Finally, on motion of Senator Aldrich, Senator Harris' appeal from the decision of the chair against his point of order was laid on the table—yeas, 33; nays, 28.

After further debate and notices of amendments by Senators Stewart and Gibson Senator Cockrell, who had the floor, yielded and the Senate took a recess till 11 a. m. to-day. The object of taking a recess instead of adjourning is supposed to be to avoid questions being raised as to the correction of the journal, as there will be no journal until the legislative day of the 22d is finished, which may not be until the pending question is finally disposed of.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — Business opened quietly in the House at the morning session. There was a thin attendance of Democrats, which lead to the belief that the latter meant to adopt their old tactics of last session. None of the leaders were present except Springer and McMillen. Rogers (Ark.) immediately after the prayer raised the point of no quorum. It was quite evident that there was no quorum, but the Speaker claimed to count 166 members. Rogers moved a call of the House, but the Speaker refused to recognize him. The clerk then began to read the journal in abbreviated form, but Mr. Springer insisted upon a reading in full and the Speaker was compelled to yield.

Mr. McMillin (Tenn.) took the floor for the purpose of impeaching the ruling of the Speaker yesterday declaring dilatory his (Mr. McMillin's) motion that the resolution reported by the rules committee be recommitted with instructions to report a resolution providing for the reading of the District of Columbia appropriation bill and setting apart two days for its consideration. Mr. Springer (Ill.), Mr. Bland (Mo.) and Mr. Enloe (Tenn.) also spoke in support of the position taken by Mr. McMillin. There was an entire absence of the disorder of the last few days, however, and the orators were calm.

The Speaker made an explanation of his position. The debate, he said, while nominally upon the approval of the journal, had really been upon the propriety of certain rulings. He did not think the frequent bickerings of the last few days added to the dignity of the House. The business of a legislative body was to legislate and not to permit its legislation to be wantonly interrupted, even by motions ordinarily proper. He explained thus fully that the grounds of his action might be understood, and he sincerely hoped there would be no further personal matters connected with it. [Applause on the Republican side, which was restrained by the chair.]

Mr. McMillin reminded the Speaker that under the rules his motion was one which could not be made more than once. The Speaker replied that the scenes of disorder Wednesday were sufficient to satisfy every member of the justice of the action of the chair. He sincerely hoped these scenes of disorder would cease. Mr. Bland (Mo.) said they would when the chair ruled according to parliamentary law.

The journal was read in full, and after some debate the District of Columbia appropriation was passed without further difficulty, and the House went into committee of the whole on the naval appropriation bill, general debate being limited to four hours. Without action the House adjourned.

GREAT EIGHT-HOUR STRUGGLE.

It Will Be Inaugurated by the Miners of America Next May.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 23.—From General Organizer Dillon of the Federation of Labor it is learned that arrangements are complete for the great eight-hour struggle of the coal miners to begin on May 1 next. The Federation has promised to support the miners, and the united mine-workers will formally indorse the movement at their annual convention in Columbus next month. About 150,000 men will be directly involved in the contest. Of these 75,000 will be in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia, 25,000 in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania, 12,000 in the Pittsburgh district and 20,000 in the central bituminous fields of this State. It is, of course, not expected that the operators will concede the eight-hour day without a strike on the part of the miners. The latter are therefore arranging to collect a $1,000,000 defense fund by May 1. For six weeks prior to that date it is calculated that 500,000 of the 690,000 members of the Federation of Labor will contribute ten cents each per week, making $300,000 from that source. The several miners' organizations already have over $200,000 for their fund, and will swell the total before the battle begins to approximate a million. There are 75,000 miners already organized, and the others will join in anticipation of the struggle.

SLAIN BY TRAMPS.

A Gang of Roughs Board a Train at Elma, Ia., and Murder the Conductor for Trying to Eject Them.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Jan. 23.—Conductor O'Neill of the Chicago & Northwestern railway was murdered by tramps aboard his train about 3 o'clock a. m., near Long Point, a station between Elma and Cedar Rapids. O'Neill was in charge of a freight train north-bound. At Elma three men boarded the train. They carried sacks, which it is believed contained articles which had been stolen. O'Neill was informed by the brakeman that the men had got aboard the train just as it was pulling out of the station and he went forward and ordered them off. They refused to get off or pay their fare, and it is supposed O'Neill attempted to eject them. Then they jumped upon him, one of them stabbing him in the side and another hitting him with some blunt instrument. The conductor was found in a dying condition when the train stopped at Long Point. The men had escaped. There is little doubt that they were house-breakers. The citizens of Long Point were informed of the murder and pursuit has been begun. It is believed the murderers are headed for this city. O'Neill was a popular and reliable employe. He leaves a wife and family at Belle Plaine.

ILLINOIS.

The Senate Confirms a Number of Executive Appointments—Doings in the House.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 23.—In the Senate half-a-dozen bills were introduced. A resolution providing for the pay of witnesses in elections cases was passed. The Senate in executive session confirmed the various appointments made during the past year by the Governor. A recess was then taken till the joint assembly. The Governor informed the Senate of the appointment of Dr. Richard Edwards as a member of the State Board of Education, vice Henry Raab, resigned. The appointment was confirmed by the executive session.

In the House the report on the investigation of the alleged mismanagement of the Insane Asylum at Anna by the committee on public charities was adopted after a long debate. No other business of importance was transacted before the meeting of the joint assembly.

The State convention of supervisors and county commissioners at the meeting here Thursday passed resolutions recommending the adoption of some good system of improvements which will give the State hard roads, and favoring the passage of a law giving commissioners power to issue bonds and compel land-owners to pay special taxes in proportion to benefits. They ask that the State provide a suitable home and a mechanical school for the care, maintenance and education of homeless children not criminals. They further declare that in view of the rapidly increasing number of incurable insane persons the State ought to make provisions to take care of all such unfortunates. They favor the Australian ballot system and demand that both real and personal property of all persons and corporations be assessed on the basis of a fair cash value; that the Legislature fix the maximum of levy at 1 per cent. of such valuation; that county authorities be not allowed to assess taxes the aggregate of which shall be more than twenty cents on each $100, and that all persons or corporations listing property for taxation be examined under oath.

MICHIGAN FARMERS.

They Make Their Power Felt in the State Senate.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 23.—The Michigan Senate consists of fourteen Democrats, fourteen Republicans and four Patrons of Industry. The Patrons hold the balance of power and have used their advantage to secure many offices from the Democratic administration. They vote, however, sometimes with one party and sometimes with the other. Thursday, the motion being to elect a committee on Congressional apportionment, thereby taking the authority from the Democratic presiding officer, the Patrons voted with the Republicans, carrying the motion and causing consternation in the Democratic ranks. The advantage of following this up with a motion to elect the committee immediately was averted by the Democrats, who appealed for a full Senate to vote upon the subject, pledging themselves not to take action on it until all Republican absentees have resumed their seats.

The House passed the bill to appropriate $7,000 to make up a deficiency in the funds of the Michigan Mining School at Houghton. The bill now goes to the Governor. A bill also passed the House appropriating $5,000 for carrying on the work of the State Pioneer and Historical Society, and bills were introduced for changing the system of collecting delinquent taxes from the Auditor-General's department to the several counties, and making an appropriation of $9,000 for continuing a compilation of the record of soldiers and sailors of the rebellion by the Adjutant-General. Both houses have voted for a recess from January 23 to January 28, but the matter will be reconsidered to-day.

A Hotel-Keeper Fails.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 23.—George W. Magee, proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel, has made an assignment to General R. W. Johnson. The Metropolitan was one of the oldest hotels in this city, and was recently remodeled and reopened. The liabilities are $15,000; assets, $20,000. The hotel will be run by the assignee for the present.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A CHECKERED CAREER.

Some of the Queer Adventures of Skeeners, the Clam Man.

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Ya-as; them was great days. It's purty dull here fer a man like me, thet's be'n havin' excitin' adventures all his life.

Johnny Harrington and Clinton King (who have strayed over from the Surf House, on the Point)—Did you ever see a pirate or a sea serpent?

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Pirates, you says? Many's the time I seen 'em. Once, when we was off Jibber-ralter, we was captured by ole Cap'n Kidd himself, an'—

Johnny Harrington—I thought he was hung over a hundred and fifty years ago.

Skeeners, the Clam Man—That's the story, but he wasn't, though; he got away the day before the execution, an' went right at it ag'in. He must 'a'been purty old, though, when he caught us. He had a crutch in one hand an' his speakin' trumpet in the other, an' his belt was all stuck full of swords and horse-pistols. He says through his speakin' trumpet: "Make 'em all walk the plank!" he says. They all had to do it till it came my turn; I says to him: "Look 'ere, cap'n, live an' let live is my motter—let's call this thing square," I says to him. He said he didn't have no hard feelin's, and he put me ashore at the next place we come to. He was a good-hearted ole feller, when you got on the right side o' him. He told me the reason he got to bein' a pirate was on account o' goin' roun' the hotels when he was a boy, playin' pool for drinks, and so on. You was askin' me 'bout sea serpents, I b'lieve. W'y, I've seen 'em all sizes, from little ones to larger 'n that house o' mine up to great big fellers twice as long as the hotel over yender. We got used to seein' 'em round the ship, an' after awhile we didn't pay much attention to 'em. One of 'em got so tame he'd come up close an' git fed every mornin'. We always fed him two barrels o' crackers an' bundle o' salt codfish; we named him Billy, an' we had an iron collar round his neck with a padlock on it. Once we played a joke on him, an' only give him one barrel o' crackers. He was so mad, he rared right up out o' the water, stuck his head over the side o' the ship, grabbed the other barrel in his teeth an' swallered it, staves, hoops, crackers an' all. Then he gave a snort you could 'a' heard ten mile, flopped his tail up higher 'n the maintop, an' sunk down out o' sight. We never seen him ag'in. Poor ole Billy; he was the most sensitive critter I ever see.

Clinton King—Did you ever see a mermaid?

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Lots of 'em—but I dunno's I oughter tell you boys any thing about them gals, they don't dress nor act accordin' to the way folks is brought up round here. We used to pass right close to the rocks they was a-layin' on often, an' it took me some time to git used to their ways; but after awhile I got to know some of 'em by sight, an' used to bow an' say "Good morning" to 'em. There was one of 'em in pertic'ler, a kinder sandy complected gal; she always used to kiss her hand to me when we was a-goin' by, and smile. I rec'lect one of her front teeth had gold fillin' in it. Then there was another one—

Voice from the House—Job!

Skeeners, the Clam Man—There was one of 'em, I remem—

Voice from the House—Job!

Skeeners, the Clam Man (glancing nervously over his shoulder)—As I was sayin', there was—

Mrs. Skeeners (appearing at the fence)—Job Skeeners, I want you to git up an' make tracks into the wood-shed here, jest about as quick as you ever done any thing in yer life. If you think I'm goin' to break my back splittin' kindlin's, while you're settin' there, stuffin' them boys with them pesky lyin' yarns o' yourn, you're mistaken. A man like you, thet's never bed the gumption to go more 'n two mile away from this place in his life, oughter at least be willin' to 'tend to the chores around the house without bein' drove! I'm gittin' clean out o' patience, an—

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Wa-al, I'll hov to leave ye now. I'm expectin' to make a v'y'ge to the Sandwidge Islands 'long in the fall; but come round anytime while I'm here, an' I'll be glad to talk to ye!—Puck.

AN ARMY PORTIA.

CHAPTER XII.

But Mabel and Georgia Marshall met at the parlor door.

There were sore hearts at Ryan in the week that followed. As had long been anticipated, orders came for the summer practice march to the Indian territory, and the Eleventh—band and all—had jogged away, leaving Maj. Kenyon to command the post, with his little battalion of infantry to guard it. The orders were received two days after Welsh's enlivening tour of guard duty. The command was to march in forty-eight hours, equipped for field service, and Lieut. Hearn, with the other troop commanders, was occupied every instant in getting his horses and men in thorough shape. Kenyon and Lane, after consultation among some of his friends, had induced the young fellow to promise not to open one of the marked copies of the newspapers which now began to crowd in with every mail, but to leave them all to be considered by the little council of three, in whose hands he had been persuaded to rest his case.

He had written a full denial of The Palladium's scandalous statements with regard to his financial entanglements, and a full description, as has already been told, of the original trouble at the trader's store with Private Welsh. These had both been handed to Col. Morris in his office. No one had heard from Lawler. No one knew just exactly what disposition the colonel had made of these papers. Mr. Abrams, too, had disappeared the day after Welsh's tour of guard duty; but the whole garrison now was flooded with newspapers by the hundred. It would seem as if the guild of the western press had resolved on a sudden and simultaneous assault on the army in general, and as if Fort Ryan was the vortex of the storm. Sensational dispatches were published from various quarters. Other journals, envious of The Palladium's exploit, unearthed other victims, long since out of the army for general worthlessness, and with flaming head lines displayed to a sympathizing public the tale of official abuse and tyranny which had compelled these several gallant and patriotic sons of America to quit the service they were so well fitted to adorn.

Dozens of tramps and tatterdemalions reaped sudden and unexpected harvest of eleemosynary quarters and lunches from gaping audiences in the beer saloons by detailing individual experiences of their own when serving under Lieut. This or That in the Eleventh horse or the Thirty-third foot. Dozens of Munchausens wore the reporters' pencils down to the wood with details of their harrowing sufferings. Then the editorials began, and gravely lectured the people on the wrongs of the whole system—the unrepublican character of an army anyhow, the repugnance in the American mind to all idea of discipline. Meantime of course The Palladium was firing hot shot by the ton, and new so called scandals at Ryan, fresh outrages on the helpless and downtrodden soldiery were the subjects of Mr. Abram's lurid delineations, until it was to be wondered at that in their wrath the offended public did not wipe the foul blot on their civilization from the face of the earth.

It was on Friday evening that in answer to certain dispatches he had been firing at department headquarters, Col. Morris received a message that at least put him out of uncertainty. That day The Palladium had outdone itself, and no one not conversant with the illimitable faculties of the paid correspondent can begin to imagine the heroic size attained in its columns by the incident briefly sketched in the last chapter: "Continued Persecution of Trooper Welsh! Heaped Up Humiliations on His Head! Forced to Show Slavish Homage to His Insulter! Helpless Wrath of Comrades!" etc. The details of the incident, as told by the special correspondent, lost nothing of sensationalism, and Lieut. Lewis came in now for his share of obloquy. Poor Welsh was represented as having been marched out, and with brutal curses compelled to salute Lieut. Hearn, despite the fact that he, as member of the guard, was by law and regulations exempted from the requirement. "In vain did the young soldier plead that paragraph 391 of the regulations fully excused him. His relentless persecutors defied the laws of congress, and compelled him to 'stand and deliver' for the purpose of adding to the indignities already heaped upon him. Could the readers of The Palladium have heard the low, deep mutterings of the men in the garrison this night no mutiny on their part need have surprised them."

The editor, too, backed up his correspondent in a three-quarter column assault on the ridiculous etiquette of the army. "It may be," he said, "all well enough in the conscripted camps of Europe, where whole nations are forced to service under arms, to exact of the rank and file this slavish exhibition to superiors, but it is an insult to the high intelligence of the soldiers of free America that because a beardless boy happens to have a strap upon his shoulder thousands of scarred veterans should be compelled to do him homage. The whole idea of the salute is repugnant to the republican mind and should be abolished; and for that matter, as we have no further use for an army, why stop at the salute?"

No doubt the ninety-and-nine of The Palladium's readers thought their editor was sound, and were as opposed to the idea of that courtesy which is officially declared to be "indispensable among military men," as to any exhibition thereof in the streets of their own peaceful and remarkably well regulated metropolis.

But Col. Morris was himself woefully perturbed about this time. After immolating Cross and other officers by name, as was to be expected, The Palladium man had taken to poking ugly little insinuations at the post commander, and this, thought Morris, was the height of ingratitude. He was in no pleasant mood when the men came marching up from stables, and it stung him to see how cordial everybody was to Hearn, who, confound it! was the cause of the whole row. The telegram he had just received settled that matter once and for all; yet he was glad he had an adjutant on whom to devolve the coming duty.

Ever since Hearn's trouble began Captain and Mrs. Lane had lost no opportunity to make him understand that they were devotedly his friends, and that if he would but come to them in his sense of utter wrong the shelter of their home, the welcome of their fireside, would be some compensation at least for the harsh treatment accorded to him by the world at large. Thanks to the efforts of the western newspaper a million or more of free people had learned to look upon his name as the synonym for all that was swaggering, brutal, drunken and bullying; and it was easy to see that the young soldier was cut to the heart.

But an unexpected ally had been discovered. Hearn, who had at first held aloof in solitude, brooding over his troubles, began to show decided readiness to come. And though at all times grateful and most attentive to Mrs. Lane, that clear sighted young matron speedily noted how his handsome blue eyes would wander about in search of her quietly observant friend, and that ever since the night of her tilt with Lawler Miss Marshall's interest in the case had been quadrupled. Now, this was not exactly what Mrs. Lane had planned. She wanted Georgia to marry in the army, but she also wanted, and saw nothing in the least unreasonable in so wanting, to select that spirited young woman's husband for her. She did not for a moment think that there was any danger of Georgia's falling in love with Hearn.

He was several years her senior, to be sure; he was handsome, distinguished as a soldier, a man of unimpeachable character as modern men go; but, she argued, "he is so much younger for his years than Georgia for hers." She had had to think so much for herself, and now the man she should marry was—well, not crabbed old Maj. Kenyon, of course; he was a widower—sour and yet susceptible. It was only too plain that he loved to come to the house and talk with Miss Marshall by the hour, especially when the cavalrymen were all down at stables. Neither did she want the doctor, whom Jeannette McCrea could have if she would only make up her mind to drop Jim Wallace, who was now so devoted that the yearning medical man had no chance whatever. No, she didn't see, after all, just the right man for Georgia; still she had always thought of some one so much older, utterly ignoring the fact that when left to themselves most women have very different views of their own. Not a word had she uttered to Georgia, of course, but to her loving and indulgent spouse she had gone so far as to say:

"It is lovely to see how he is beginning to find comfort in her society; but, Fred"— And madame breaks off, irresolute, yet suggestive.

"But, Mabel"— responds her gray eyed lord with indefiniteness equal to her own.

"Just suppose"— And then another pause on her part.

"Just suppose what, Mrs. Lane—that it should snow before September?"

"Now, Fred, you know, or else you haven't any eyes for"——

"I haven't—except for one," says Lane, parrying the situation with the very words he knows will most delight her.

"You absurd boy!" But she comes fluttering across the room to reward him as he deserves. "What I mean is, Georgia might get to think of him."

"Well, everybody is thinking of him just now, and in the light of such a catastrophe I suppose I'd have to make him think of her."

"He does now; and if he doesn't—you can't make people fall in love, can you?"

"Agreed, Mrs. Wisehead. Neither can you prevent it, can you? I know I couldn't stop a fellow from falling in love with you some few years ago, hard as I tried. The more I tried to put you away, the more you kept coming into that fellow's empty head." (Here Capt. Lane is rewarded again, and as soon as able to speak resumes.) "So why worry now?"

"Well, I'm not worrying exactly, only"——

"Only what? Every man can't have a wife like mine. Still, wouldn't she make rather a good one?"

"Good? Goodness! But the question is to find the right man. However, I know what you mean, Fred. Don't interfere; so I won't. And there they are chatting in the parlor, yet, and it's time for him to get ready for parade— Why, here's Mr. Mason!" And Mrs. Lane, who had slipped into the dining room, caught sight of the adjutant at the front door.

"What is it, Mason?" asked Lane, a sudden trouble in his eyes, as he hurried through the hall.

"The colonel wishes Mr. Wharton to assume command of C troop temporarily. I'm ordered to place Hearn in arrest," was the answer, in tones that trembled a little despite Mason's efforts at impassibility.

Lane's hand was extended as though to close the parlor door, which stood ajar, but he was too late. The clink of the scabbard without had already been heard, and almost at the instant Hearn stepped forth into the hall.

"You won't have far to look, old fellow. Here I am."

"My heaven, Hearn! I thought to find you over home, or I would never have come here on such an errand."

"Never mind; I am with you. Good-by, captain; say good afternoon to—to the ladies for me."

"By Jove! I'm going over with you," said Lane, snatching a forage cap and springing down the steps. He did not want to encounter the questioning eyes within.

But Mabel and Georgia Marshall met at the parlor door.

"Have you heard—do you know?" was the faltering question of the former.

"Hear! Know! Who could help hearing? Is it not an outrage?"

IN SESSION AGAIN.

Re-Opening of the British Parliament—An Ovation to Sir John Pope Hennessy.

LONDON, Jan 23.—Parliament re-assembled with a scanty attendance. During the course of the early business in the House Mr Parnell gave notice that he would call attention to the administration of the crimes act, and would offer a resolution asking the Government to facilitate the discussion of the subject. Mr. Justin McCarthy and Mr. Thomas Sexton introduced Sir John Pope Hennessy, the new National member for North Kilkenny, who recently defeated Mr. Vincent Scully, Mr. Parnell's candidate, for that seat. Sir John was greeted with long and loud Liberal and anti-Parnell cheers. The Parnellites made no counter demonstration.

During a conversation in the lobby of the House of Commons Mr. Parnell declared his intention to assert his authority as the leader of the Nationalist party and to engage actively in work during the present session of Parliament.

PARADE AT PINE RIDGE.

The Indians Presumably Impressed by a Grand Military Review.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 23.—The review of the troops in the field took place at 11 o'clock a. m. about four miles from the agency. The column was led by the Ogalalla scouts under Lieutenant Taylor, of the Ninth Cavalry. The infantry followed under Colonel Wheaton, of the Second. Then came the artillery, under Captain Capron; finally the cavalry under General Carr, of the Sixth. The review was held by General Miles, who was attended by his staff. The column marched past the commanding General in company front. After the review of the military there was a display of the transportation department of the army. There were 3,000 men and 370 horses in line.

THE BENNETT LAW.

Wisconsin Republicans Introduce a Substitute for the Famous Measure.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 23.—The Republicans have introduced in the Senate a bill in the nature of a substitute for the famous Bennett law, which the Democrats are about to repeal. The essential clauses of the bill are: Section 1, which provides that every parent or other person having under his control a child between the ages of 7 and 13 years shall cause the said child to attend some public, private or parochial school during the school year for a period of not less than twelve weeks, and section 4, which says that every parent or other person having under his control a child between the ages of 7 and 13 years shall furnish it such instruction in the English language as shall enable it to read and write the same, but this act shall not be construed to prohibit any other language or branches of learning. That clause of the Bennett law relative to the employment of child labor is adhered to.

Work of the Flames at Marquette.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Jan. 23. — Fire broke out at 5:45 p. m. Thursday in Hager & Johnson's furniture manufactory at Marquette and the building was burned to the ground. It then attacked the Mining Journal office and threatened the whole business portion of the city. Ishpeming and Negaunee were asked for assistance. The Nester block was also damaged. It is estimated that the loss to Hager & Johnson will be $30,000, to the Mining Journal Company $30,000 and to the Nester block $2,000. About one-third of the loss is covered by insurance.

Was ever more hopelessly stranded than a wrecked constitution, whether its disaster be the product of some formidable malady, or that slow, premature decay that seems to fasten upon some constitutions without apparent adequate cause. An excellent means of checking this gradual drain of the sources of vitality is the beneficent tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which promotes digestion, enriches the blood and gives substance as well as stamina to an enfeebled frame. Constipation, feebleness of the kidneys and bladder, fever and ague and rheumatism are among the bodily ailments which it remedies promptly and and thoroughly. BAD PLAYS PAY BEST.

"Muldoon's Picnic" Man Clears His Soul.

ROBS PEOPLE AND SMILES.

A First Class Attraction Would Draw No Larger Houses, and Would Cost More Money—Base Ball in The Bower City.

"The way people are fleeced by these theatre companies is shameful," said J. W. Horton, a Chicago traveling man at the Myers this morning. "The manager of the Muldoon's Picnic company was within hearing distance and began to prick up his ears.

"They make up a company from a lot of actors who are stranded in Chicago or some other place, and without any rehearsing or other preparation they start out on the road. They don't care what kind of a show they give and depend upon coarse jokes and local hits to carry them through.

* * *

"Well, my friend, that is a good deal so," said the "Picnic" manager as he strolled up. "I don't know that you were referring to my company, but I judge so. Now, no matter how good a show we take out, if we are not well known, no one will patronize us. So you see we get up almost anything and trust to luck. I don't care how much the people howl about my show. The name always deserves a crowd, and when I get their money that's all that I want. We made good money last night.

* * *

"I hope they can put Janesville in the state league for next season," remarked a local enthusiast this morning. "It is a first rate thing for the town. There is one thing that they can't do, however, if they want to make a success with a Janesville club. That is, make it up of local players. The home club must be composed of imported talent and the Janesville boys must play with the clubs of other cities, to arouse any enthusiasm.

* * *

"The public never encourages the home club unless the principal stations are filled by imported men. They haven't the confidence in their own players that they have in a stranger. Put Janesville men in outside clubs and outside men in Janesville clubs, and the thing will work. Otherwise something will drop.

* * *

"The 'Island' will make a splendid ball park. It is only a short distance from the center of the town, and is completely isolated. Yelling and cheering by the 'cranks' won't disturb anybody. When they played ball at the fair grounds you could advertise to call the game at 3 o'clock but it would be after 4 before the game would begin. At the island this trouble would be obviated. Games could be called at 4 o'clock, sharp, and the crowd would be there on time. First ward people could cross the Fourth Avenue bridge, and people from town could go up Main street. It is only a few minutes' walk in any case, and the carryalls would run if wanted.

* * *

"Yes," said Manager Brisco with a reminiscent look in his eye, "the island is, I suppose, surrounded by water. The crowd could take the umpire by the coat collar, tie the bases to his feet and throw him in with politeness, neatness and dispatch, when they didn't like that decision at third base."

For a time she seemed to improve and her recovery was earnestly hoped for but the disease went to her brain and heart, and after much severe suffering death came to her relief.

Miss Jennie was the eldest daughter of Mrs. Isabel Youngclause, of Harmony, and was in the twenty-first year of her age. Besides her mother, three sisters and two brothers mourn the loss of a dear sister. Always of a sweet disposition she was beloved by all who knew her.

SEWERS FOR THE CITY.

Aldermen Planning to Take Definite Action.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

The Question to be Discussed by the Council at its Session Monday Evening—Engineer Wells to Give His Views and Make a Proposition.

The common council will be called upon Monday evening to take action on one of the most important measures that has come before that body since the organization of the city government. More important it will be because of the large sum of money required to carry the project through.

The question will be that of securing plans and specifications for a complete sewerage system of the city.

Many of the aldermen, as well as private citizens, have witnessed with much concern the construction of private sewers every few weeks, all having their outlet in the river right in the thickly settled or business portion of the city. They are beginning to realize that this should no longer be tolerated, unless the people are willing to allow such disease-breeding nuisances to longer exist in our midst.

It is held that the best and perhaps the only way to stop and prevent further trouble from this source is to establish a sewerage system, and then compel property owners to construct their drains and sewers according to this plan.

C. E. Wells, an eminent engineer who has had much experience in building sewers, has been in the city looking over the ground and interviewing the members of the common council. The result of his visit will be made known on Monday evening when he will be present at the meeting, and make a proposition to prepare plans and specifications for a complete sewerage system of the city. Many of the aldermen favor this course.

Notwithstanding the fact that the building of sewers in any city is an expensive public work, perhaps more expensive than any other single item of municipal expense, yet our local law is so framed that a system of sewerage can be built by districts at the pleasure of the common council, thus avoiding heavy taxation or the letting of an expensive contract in any one year. It is urged that when plans are approved and adopted that the main sewers should be built as soon as possible, and then the district lines could be constructed at the pleasure of the property owners.

This question has been before the common council several times, but no decisive action has been taken for the reason that no civil engineer has ever been secured to advise with the aldermen in the matter. It is claimed that on Monday evening this question will be fully discussed, and in all probability some definite action taken towards securing plans and specifications.

IN NEED OF STENOGRAPHERS.

But They Must Be Endowed With Good Common Sense.

With two short hand schools in the city Janesville will have more than a passing interest in the article on "The Demand for Stenographers," published in The Ladies Home Journal for February.

"The demand for good, careful and accurate stenogaaphers and typewriters is increasing, not decreasing, says The Ladies Home Journal. A girl needs to know how to spell and punctuate a letter, besides being able to correct one that is wrong grammatically. She must be possessed of that rare and priceless qualification—common sense. She must be observing, and she should have an average amount of intelligence. No prodigy is required.

"As to wages, the average young girl cannot expect to be paid as much as the average man. A young woman, for instance, will get ten or twelve dollars a week where a young man of the same calibre will receive fifteen or twenty dollars. Perhaps there is an indefinable feeling among employers that they cannot exact so much from a woman as they can from a man. A man will be often required to do a great deal of miscellaneous work in connection with shorthand and typewriting, which would never be imposed on a woman.

"But there can be no doubt that there is still room for those who will take the trouble to properly equip themselves for the work. The remuneration is ample for the needs of the average girl, and greatly in excess of that paid for other kinds of clerical work."

OH, BUT THOSE JOKES!

"Muldoon's Picnic" Spreads Havoc Through the Land.

A worse lot of alleged actors never inflicted moss covered jokes on the public than appeared at Lappin's opera house last evening. One young lady danced fairly well, but aside from that there was not a good point about the play (?). Tonight they appear at Edgerton, and if any Edgerton people are taken with palpitation of the heart their Janesville friends will know what caused it.

BOTH NINES PLAY WELL.

To-Night's Ball Game Likely to be of Much Interest.

The Madison University's Indoor base ball club will play the Janesville Light Infantry at the Armory to-night. The soldier-boys have been practicing and are in good form. The Madison boys are experts, having defeated one of the crack Chicago clubs recently. The game promises to be unusually fine, and the Armory should be packed. Admission twenty-five cents.

St. Cecilia Notes.

Mrs. Nettie Booth Wegg, so well known to Janesville people as an accomplished violinist, will be prominent in the concert Friday evening, January 30.

DIED WHILE HER ESCORT FLED.

Mary Williams Drowned Before the Eyes of Her Companion.

While her escort scrambled ashore in safety, Miss Mary Williams went under the ice to death in Fowler lake. Miss Williams, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Williams, live near Koshkonong, was skating by moonlight with a party of young friends. The Jefferson papers say that she and her escort, a young man about twenty years of age, were skating arm in arm when they broke through the ice, about an inch thick, which had formed where the old ice had been cut last Tuesday for an ice house. They sank together, her arms clasped about him.

As they rose to the surface he got a firm hold on the ice and told her to do the same. She failed to do so, and he lost sight of her. By this time three boys, who had heard their cry for help, had skated up with a plank. Miss Williams' escort, who had by this time dragged himself out of the water, and who could still see some of her garments on the surface, thrust the plank across the aperture, about four feet, with a view of going to her rescue; but as the further end of the plank was on the frail ice only, he concluded not to risk the effort; and, after telling the lads present to go and procure help to get her out, he departed for home. Soon afterward three men arrived with a lantern and a light boat, drew the body out of the water and conveyed it to the Jones house, where Dr. Miller pronounced life extinct. A memorable feature of the case is that it was clearly proven that when, by the aid of a lantern, the body was discovered it was in an upright position, the head about a foot beneath the surface of the water, the arms hanging down, the feet not resting on anything.

THE SKATES ARE COMING.

A Shipment Expected to Arrive To-morrow Morning—A Popular Premium.

By to-morrow The Gazette will be able once more to provide skates for its youthful "boomers." Since last Saturday the demand has been greater than the supply. No skates of the desired quality were to be had in Chicago as the demand for the "Czar" throughout the northwest has exhausted the stocks of western jobbers. Ice-skating has been the rage this season as much as roller skating three years ago. Consequently it was necessary to send to Philadelphia for the skates, and last evening word was received that the consignment would reach Janesville Saturday. All those who have brought in the requisite five names during the week can secure their premiums by calling at this office to-morrow. Boys' skates have been provided in Sizes. 9 9½, 10, 10½ and 11, and in girls' skates there is an equal range.

Those who secured The Gazette skates early in the season, report that they have been very satisfactory. Five new subscribers for one month, and the skates are yours. It would be hard to spend an hour more profitably than in canvassing with this prospect before you.

BIG STORM COMING.

Prophet Foster Extorts Secrets From the Weather Man.

W. F. Foster has felt the pulse of the weather clerk, and announces a big storm for the 27th. Looking forward into the dim and misty future he says: "February will be a cold backward month. The fifty-two days rain period will begin about the 8th, and continue at intervals about two weeks. A warm wave will cross the continent from the 10th to the 14th, followed by a cool wave. Dangerous storms, with occasional sudden and heavy rainfalle, will occur.

April will be a remarkable month for stormy, rainy, blustry, disagreeable weather, unusually changeable in the northern states; but the electric currents of the earth will be so active that vegetation will make a wonderfully rapid growth.

BATTERY OF GATLINGS.

Janesville's New Organization Assured.

DOE ON THE EDWARDS' BILL

He Insists that the State Militia Needs More Clothes Rather than More Members—How the Battery Project Now Stands in the Legislature.

Adjutant General Doe is reported as strongly opposed to the Edwards military bill providing for the mustering in several new companies of militia.

As it has been understood that the Edwards bill opened the gates for the mustering in of Janesville's projected "Light Battery" his position in the matter is regarded with much interest in this city. The attorney general's reasons for his opposition are that the present companies should be properly equipped before mustering in any more companies. He says that there is not at the present time a fully equipped company in the state, and believes the question of equipment is paramount to that of numbers.

The Edwards' bill provides for increasing the number of military companies to forty-five, and providing for the organization of infantry companies at La Crosse, Marshfield, Grand Rapids and Ashland. A strong opposition has developed to increasing the guard, since the introduction of Mr. Edwards' bill. The Milwaukee contingent of the national guard has been clamoring for a regimental organization for some time, and that question was broached at the recent meeting of the National Guard Association. They do not propose to oppose the bill simply because Milwaukee is not in it, and are non-committed as to the advisability of increasing the number of companies, but declare that Milwaukee ought to have a regiment of infantry.

Unless a change is made, the bill now before the assembly will not affect the chances of Janesville for a battery. The organization of the company in this city is practically assured, the steps already taken, and mentioned in The Gazette's Madison dispatches earlier in the week making disappointment improbable. The battery will be in reality a supplemental organization, equipped with two Gatling guns, and entered on the rolls as "Gatling Gun Section, First Regiment."

YOUNG FOLKS TO FIGHT RUM.

Nearly 200 Members of a Juvenile Temple Already Secured.

A meeting will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Good Templars' Hall, Court Street M. E. church block, for the purpose of organizing a Juvenile Temple. Nearly two hundred members have already been secured. The managers of this juvenile temperance work urge parents to send their children to this meeting, as it is desired to organize one of the largest and strongest juvenile temples in the state. Every child in the city will be made welcome to join in this organization, and it is sincerely hoped parents will take the interest to send their children and thus lend their aid in the good work. There is no expense attending the meeting.

The Bloom Was on the Alder and the Tassel on the Corn.

I heard the bob-white whistle in the dewy breath of morn:
The bloom was on the alder and the tassel on the corn.
I stood with beating heart beside the babbling Mac-o-chee,
To see my love come down the glen to keep her tryst with me.

I saw her pace with quiet grace the shaded path along,
And pause to pluck a flower or hear the thrush's song.
Denied by her proud father as a suitor to be seen,
She came to me, with loving trust, my gracious little queen.

Above my station, heaven knows, that gentle maiden shone,
For she was belle and wide beloved, and I a youth unknown.
The rich and great about her thronged, and sought on bended knee
The love this gracious princess gave, with all her heart, to me.

So like a startled fawn before my longing eyes she stood,
With all the freshness of a girl in flush of womanhood.
I trembled as I put my arm about her form divine,
And stammered as in awkward speech I begged her to be mine.

'Tis sweet to hear the pattering rain that lulls a dim lit dream;
'Tis sweet to hear the song of birds, and sweet the rippling stream;
'Tis sweet amid the mountain pines to hear the south winds sigh,
More sweet than these and all besides was the loving, low reply.

The little hand I held in mine held all I had in life,
To mold its better destiny and soothe to sleep its strife.
'Tis said that angels watch o'er men, commissioned from above;
My angel walked with me on earth and gave to me her love.

Ah! dearest wife, my heart is stirred, my eyes are dim with tears—
I think upon the loving faith of all these bygone years;
For now we stand upon this spot, as in that dewy morn,
With bloom upon the alder and the tassel on the corn.

—Donn Piatt.

Questionings.

I met a little cottage girl
Eighteen years old, she said,
Her brain was tired with the whirl
Of questions in her head.

She asked me, "What's an optimist?"
"Good luck made flesh!" I cried.
"And what then is a pessimist?"
"Bad luck personified!"

With that she asked me to explain
A Christian Scientist.
Said I, "He's one who cures a pain
That doesn't quite exist."

"And what is an agnostic, pray?"
"Sweetheart, I do not know."
She turned her pretty head away—
"To Vassar I must go!"

"Please don't, until you've answered me
One question—you've asked four:
My little wife, dear, will you be?
I ask for love, not lore!"

Five years ago to-night, my eyes!
I hear a sweet voice croon
A lullaby, while Tommy cries,
"But what is in the moon?"

Conductor Bradley.

Conductor Bradley (always may his name
Be said with reverence), as the swift doom came,
Smitten to death, a crushed and mangled frame,

Sank with the brake he grasped, just where he stood
To do the utmost a brave man could,
And die, if need be, as a true man should.

Men stooped over him; women dropped their tears
On that poor wreck beyond all hopes and fears,
Lost in the strength and glory of his years.

What heard they! Lo! the ghastly lips of pain,
Dead to all thought save duty's, move again,
"Put out the signal for the other train."

No nobler utterance since the world began
From lips of saint or martyr ever ran
Electric through the sympathies of man.

Ah me! how poor and noteless seem to this,
The sickbed dramas of self consciousness,
Our sensual fears of pain and hopes of bliss.

Oh, grand, supreme endeavor! not in vain
That last brave act of failing tongue and brain!
Freighted with life the downward rushing train.

Following the wrecked one, as wave follows wave,
Obeyed the warning which the dead lips gave;
Others he saved, himself he could not save.

Nay! the lost life was saved. He is not dead
Who, in his record, still the earth shall tread,
With God's clear aureole shining round his head.

We bow in the dust with all our pride
Of virtue dwarfed the noble deed beside.
God give us grace to live as Bradley died.

—J. G. Whittier.

Being a Woman.

Once a woman came,
Within a churchyard close,
Suddenly on a name
Unhidden by vine or rose.

There it was he lay
Who long had wronged her sore,
Harmed her many a day,
But should never harm her more.

Bare and bleak the stone
That marked his place of sleep;
Slowly the days have flown—
Had no one come to weep?

Long she stood and gazed,
Disarmed as he who slept;
Then, with her eyes upraised,
Being a woman—she wept.

—Cecil Charles.

The Hypocrites.

Golden gleamings from summer sunshine garnish the silken strands
That the spider has woven so cunningly in a mesh of beautiful bands;
Deep in the depths of his cone curved cell the spider, hideous, sits.
Like to the spider's hideous truth are the hearts of hypocrites.

—Marvin Hill Dana.

Song.

The sweetest songs are those
That few men ever hear,
And no men ever sing;

The clearest skies are those
That farthest off appear
To birds of strongest wing;

The dearest loves are those
That no man can come near
With his best following.

—Jean Ingelow.

The Children.

Ah! what would the world be to us
If the children were no more?
We should dread the desert behind us
Worse than the dark before.
They are better than all the ballads
That ever were sung or said,
For they are living poems,
And all the rest are dead.
